

New Leaders for New Schools Announces an Exciting Partnership with the Stanford University Policy, Organization, and Leadership Studies (POLs) Master's program!

Building on our shared vision and beliefs, New Leaders and Stanford's School of Education have developed an innovative partnership. Together, they offer a program that combines a top-rate educational Master's experience at Stanford with the rigorous curriculum, ongoing support, and a preliminary administrative credential for urban school leadership from New Leaders.

WHAT

Interested candidates must apply to both New Leaders and the POLs program at Stanford's School of Education by the first deadline of each respective program. If a candidate is admitted into BOTH programs, New Leaders will grant early admission to the residency program starting in 2009. Prior to matriculating into the joint program, candidates will sign a formal contract with New Leaders, committing to start the residency the following year. Accepted candidates will enter the Stanford POLs program in the fall of 2008 and begin New Leaders Summer Foundations and Residency in the summer of 2009.

WHO

This partnership ONLY exists for New Leaders New Schools California's Bay Area, New York City, and Washington, DC program sites. Candidates applying to other New Leaders for New Schools program sites are NOT eligible for early admission for future years
